NSE / BSE — Indian Equity Markets

1. Introduction

This report presents a fundamental and technical analysis of three blue-chip Indian stocks listed on the National Stock Exchange (NSE): Reliance Industries Limited, Tata Consultancy Services (TCS), and HDFC Bank Limited. The analysis covers price trends, P/E ratio, market capitalisation, recent news, and key performance indicators as of May 2026. These three companies represent different sectors — energy & retail, information technology, and banking — providing a diversified view of the Indian large-cap equity landscape.

2. At a Glance — Summary Comparison

The table below summarises the key metrics for all three stocks at a glance:

Stock	Price (₹)	P/E	Mkt Cap (₹ Cr)	1Y Return	Rating
Reliance Ind.	~1,400	19.1x	18,27,569	+0.83%	HOLD
TCS	~2,284	16.8x	8,23,549	-34.7%	WATCH
HDFC Bank	~758	15.6x	11,99,220	-25.7%	BUY

3. Individual Stock Analysis

3.1 Reliance Industries Limited (RELIANCE)

Reliance Industries Ltd
Current Price	₹ 1,400 (approx)	P/E Ratio	19.1x
Market Cap	₹ 18,27,569 Cr	52W High	₹ 1,611.80
1-Year Return	+0.83% (1-Year)	52W Low	₹ 1,290.00
Verdict	HOLD — Steady revenue growth; near-term earnings pressure from KG-D6 decline

Price Trend: Reliance hit a 17-month high of ₹1,593 in January 2026 but has since pulled back to ~₹1,400 amid subdued Q4 FY26 earnings. The stock's 52-week range is ₹1,290–₹1,612. Over 1 year the stock is essentially flat (+0.83%) compared to a broader Nifty decline, indicating relative resilience.

Fundamentals: Q4 FY26 gross revenue rose a strong 12.9% YoY to ₹3,25,290 crore, supported by its O2C, Jio digital services, and Retail segments. However, consolidated PAT fell 8.9% YoY to ₹20,589 crore, dragged by declining KG-D6 gas output and lower refining margins. P/E of ~19x is reasonable for a conglomerate of this scale. The P/B ratio of ~2x reflects a large asset base. The company has announced its 49th AGM on June 19, 2026 with a dividend record date of June 5, 2026.

Recent News: Reliance is set to invest nearly ₹2 lakh crore to build India's largest data centre cluster in Andhra Pradesh, marking a significant pivot toward the AI & cloud infrastructure space. This long-term catalyst is being closely watched by institutional investors.

3.2 Tata Consultancy Services (TCS)

Tata Consultancy Services Ltd
Current Price	₹ 2,284 (27 May 2026)	P/E Ratio	16.8x
Market Cap	₹ 8,23,549 Cr	52W High	₹ 3,545.00
1-Year Return	-34.7% (1-Year)	52W Low	₹ 2,206.40
Verdict	WATCH — Strong fundamentals; valuation correction underway; await stabilisation

Price Trend: TCS has had a difficult 12 months, declining ~35% from its 52-week high of ₹3,545 to a current price near ₹2,284. The stock hit a 52-week low of ₹2,206 in May 2026. Despite this, it posted a small recovery — gaining 2.77% month-on-month in April 2026 — suggesting early signs of stabilisation. Year-to-date performance remains deeply negative at approximately -22.8%.

Fundamentals: TCS delivered solid Q4 FY26 results — consolidated net profit jumped 12.22% YoY and revenue from operations grew 9.65% YoY. Revenue in dollar terms reached $7,621 million (+1.5% QoQ). Operating margin stood at 25.3% and net margin at 19.5%. For full-year FY26, net profit rose 8.79% YoY to ₹52,820 crore. The P/E ratio of ~16.8x is now well below the IT sector average of ~40x, indicating the stock may be undervalued relative to peers. Dividend yield stands at a healthy ~4.6%. The AGM is scheduled for June 9, 2026, with a final dividend of ₹31/share.

Recent News: TCS bagged three mega deals worth a total contract value (TCV) of $12 billion in Q4 FY26 and added 4 clients in the $100M+ category. It also successfully implemented its TCS BaNCS solution for the ASX CHESS Project in Australia, benchmarked to process 20 million trades/day. Investor forums are planned for June 2026 in Mumbai.

3.3 HDFC Bank Limited (HDFCBANK)

HDFC Bank Limited
Current Price	₹ 758 (27 May 2026)	P/E Ratio	15.6x
Market Cap	₹ 11,99,220 Cr	52W High	₹ 1,020.50
1-Year Return	-25.7% (1-Year)	52W Low	₹ 726.65
Verdict	BUY (Long-term) — Low P/E, strong Q4 earnings, improving deposit growth

Price Trend: HDFC Bank has corrected significantly from its all-time high of ₹1,020 (October 2025) to ~₹758, a drop of nearly 26%. The 52-week low is ₹726.65. However, the stock has shown signs of recovery — it is up 4.4% from its 52-week low and 5.41% in the past month alone. The current market cap of ~₹11.99 lakh crore makes it India's second-largest bank by market value.

Fundamentals: HDFC Bank reported a net profit of ₹19,221 crore in Q4 FY26 — one of its strongest quarterly results. Full-year FY26 revenue was ₹2.83 trillion (+3.84% YoY) and earnings were ₹760.26 billion (+7.39% YoY). The P/E ratio of 15.6x is attractive for a large-cap private bank, trading at a meaningful discount to its 3-year average. The bank has received RBI approval to acquire up to 9.95% in an unnamed entity, signalling expansion plans. Credit and deposit growth outpaced the broader banking system.

Recent News: HDFC Bank's board cautioned about potential risks from the West Asia conflict and its effect on crude oil prices, which could indirectly impact credit costs. The bank is investing heavily in technology and digital platforms. Merger integration synergies from the HDFC Ltd. merger continue to materialise, supporting margin expansion expectations going forward.

5. Conclusion & Investment Outlook

The three stocks present distinct risk-reward profiles in the current market environment (May 2026):

Stock	Strength	Risk	Outlook
Reliance	Diversified revenue, Jio & Retail growth, data centre plans	KG-D6 gas decline, lower refining margins, high debt	HOLD. Await earnings recovery and Jio monetisation clarity.
TCS	$12B TCV deal wins, 25% EBIT margin, 4.6% dividend yield	Global IT spending slowdown, rupee volatility, US tariff risks	WATCH. Attractive valuation at 16.8x P/E; accumulate on dips.
HDFC Bank	Strong Q4 profit, credit/deposit growth, merger synergies	West Asia geopolitical risk, NIM compression concern	BUY (long-term). Low P/E of 15.6x; near 52W low offers opportunity.

Overall, all three companies are fundamentally strong, large-cap leaders in their respective sectors. The broader Indian equity market (Nifty 50 at ~24,000) has faced headwinds in 2026 from global macro uncertainty. However, India's long-term growth story remains intact. Among the three, HDFC Bank appears most attractively valued at current levels for long-term investors, while TCS offers a recovery opportunity for those patient enough to wait out the IT sector reset. Reliance remains a solid defensive hold given its diversified business model and upcoming growth catalysts.
